2017 Research Focus

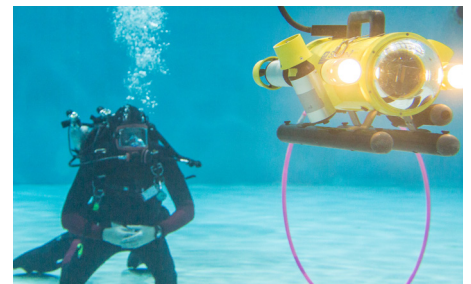

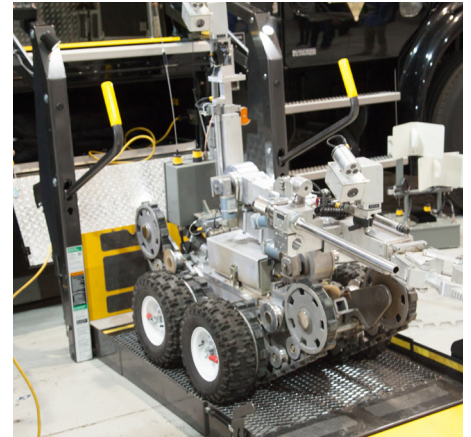

The conduct of this year's exercise examines the capabilities required to prevent and mitigate the effects of multi-domain threats to maritime commerce, port and maritime operations, and critical maritime infrastructure.

MAST Features

- A venue to systematically identify, evaluate and implement solutions through education, experimentation and operational evaluation
- An operationally focused perspective on Global Trade and Maritime Security
- Relevant technology demonstrations and collaborative opportunities
- Subject Matter Expert panels and facilitated discussions
- Collaborative interchange between public and private sector stakeholders
- An entry point for business and industry partnerships with education

Background

The Coastal Trident program was established by the Port of Hueneme as a comprehensive training, experimentation and exercise program. Since its inception in 2007, the program has grown to be a robust and agile program to facilitate strategic innovation and regional advantages through the integration and exercise of components of specialized capabilities in order to validate effectiveness and suitability against threat scenarios. MAST is the experimentation element of the program designed to match technological solutions with operational requirements through scenario-based field test and evaluation activities.
